Harding Reported as Saying
That 10 Applicants for Each Appointive Job

By JACK ROYLE,
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent.

MARION, Ohio, Jan. 15.—When the name plates are changed on the 11 chairs about the cabinet table at the white house next March, it is predicted the name of John W. Weeks of Massachusetts will be engraved on one of them. Which department will claim him may be decided as a result of his conference today with Senator Harding.

Senator Weeks himself, according to his intimates, would prefer the treasury portfolio, but Senator Harding and some of the republican leaders are said to desire he take over direction of the navy. A compromise may seat him in the chair of secretary of war.

Hates to Rule Classmates.
Senator Weeks' objection to the navy post, it is said, is based on the fact that he was educated at Annapolis and was the classmate and intimate friend of many of the higher officers of the navy who would be under his direction.

Congressman Joseph W. Fordney, chairman of the house committee on the navy, discussed with the new president among other things, the tariff legislation, which will be considered at the special session of congress. Tariff schedules are his specialty and he is popularly believed to be able to give off hand the duties on any article between acorns and alibis.

He is counted on to help frame the schedules which will make effective Senator Harding's plans for revision of the tariff upward.

Former governor H. B. Odell of New York held an extensive conference with Senator Harding and is believed to have touched on political organization and cabinet makeup.

Race Question Discussed.
Among other visitors today were John W. Weaver of Huntington, Ind.; Myer Bloomfield publisher of Boston, and Sidney Spitzer of Toledo.

The problems and conditions of citizens of America were outlined to the senator by Joseph W. Johnson of New York, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Senator Harding, it may be stated, is doing more worrying over the postman than over the postmaster. He can get plenty of postmaster. He can get plenty of postoffice. He can get plenty of postoffice. He can get plenty of postoffice. He can get plenty of postoffice.

Senator Harding, however, is determined to strengthen both the force and morale of the postal employees and is pledged to revulsion of their salaries upward. He is giving deep thought, it is said, to the reorganization of the postoffice department and to the elimination of abuses which are alleged now to exist.

to resume his address, which he concluded with the words:

"Long live the republic which comes to us from the dead, from the prisons, from the exiles—in which the proletariat of all countries unite."

Reds Parade Ends in Riot.
BERLIN, Jan. 15.—Four persons were wounded in a clash this afternoon between the communists and the police followed fiery speeches in which demands were made for the overthrow of the government. Six thousand persons, including Rosa Luxemburg, the radical socialist leader, broke through the police cordons at Charlottenstrasse and Friedrichstrasse and tried to rush a third cordon in the direction of the police in panic when shots were fired from the Brandenburg gate.

WARRANT FOR SEARCH
Decides Officers Can't Search Man's Home on "Dog" Warrant.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 15.—A man's home is his castle and he may defend it, under certain conditions, against prohibition, revenue or other legal agents.

The two men were indicted by the grand jury and charged with using deadly weapons in resisting an officer.

"Probable cause is a legal conclusion for the magistrate to deduce, and the mere assertion, under oath, that the affiant believes the law is being violated is insufficient," ruled Federal Judge J. C. Wolcott.

The court held, as a consequence, that the defendant was entitled to defend his "castle" in any manner he saw fit.

standing with the important group in the chamber, called the "national bloc." It seems probable he will be able to form a ministry that will command a working majority in parliament.

President Poincaré's entry into the government is considered impossible in a coalition combination, the former executive having made a condition of his acceptance of a post under Poincaré that Henri Viviani, instead of M. Briand, be given the foreign affairs portfolio.

into the permanent law and hence they will not be subject to points of order.

Party lines were torn down in the discussion, Chairman Snyder said both republican and democratic members of the indian committee joining in the assault on the bill. It was openly charged by members of the indian committee that only two members of the enlarged appropriation committee knew what was in the indian bill. These two members were Elston of California, republican, and Hastings of Oklahoma, democrat, who were taken off the indian committee and put on the enlarged appropriations committee several weeks ago. Together these two men wrote the bill, it was charged.

Indian committee members said these two men had assumed all the power in writing a bill, which formerly had been the result of the deliberations of 21 members of the indian affairs committee. Chairman Snyder made it plain that he thought the bill should be sent back to the indian committee.

Predictions were made that the same procedure would be followed on the army and navy bills and that the combined action would wreck the budget plan, or at least cause a big change in it.

Hot passions between members featured the day. At one time Congressman Carter of Oklahoma, member of the indian committee, and Congressman Madden of Illinois took exception to each other. Carter, taking the discussion by shoving, "I take anything coming from the gentleman from Illinois the same way that the colored man took the kick from a nigger. Consider the source."

Chairman Snyder said that if the enlarged appropriations committee was to assume all the power of the house, the rest of the membership may as well resign and enter some gainful occupation, as their presence in Washington hereafter will be wholly superfluous.

It was said tonight that the senate, which did not change its rule, in anticipation, might put all the bills knocked out today back in the bill and if so the bill would come back to conference and be indefinitely tied up. With the same procedure on the army and navy bills, three great money measures would be tied up and go over to the Harding administration.

Conferences will be held over Sunday to attempt to compose the differences.

Searching Passengers for Liquor Forbidden on New York Railway

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 15.—The Boston & Albany road decried the Volstead act a knockout punch in the second round in their on-continuing fight to make it prohibitive to search passengers for liquor on the road's property.

The first round was won by the "dry agents," who ignored a request of road officials to stop holding up passengers and searching their baggage in the union station here.

The activities of the Worcester "dry agents" are stilled undiminished by J. Battaglia, head of the road's police force. Prohibition agents will not be allowed to dislodge passengers until they are, unless they know a person is transporting liquor.

LAUNDRY DRIVER ROBBED OF $224

Hijackers Get Only $5 at Lewis Avenue Store—
Robbers Use Auto

Hijackers opened shop again last night and held up a light wagon laundry wagon getting $224 from the driver. A grocery store at Tenth street and Lewis avenue was also held up but the proprietor, H. R. Wells, had taken the advice given by the chief of police and had only about $5 in his money drawer—this was all the robber got.

Alex Hansen, driver for the Right Way laundry, driving east on the Arkansas river bridge about 7 o'clock p. m. and just as he drove off the east end of the bridge two masked men, jumped into the middle of the road and at the point of guns made him stop his car, then ordered him to drive off the pavement and south down the partially completed highway.

About 100 yards from the end of the bridge Hansen was told to stop and the bandits searched him, taking $224 from his pockets. Hansen then drove off the highway and ran on for $2.93 the other $1. After taking Hansen's money the robbers ordered him to turn around and drive on to town. He then disappeared into the brush.

About 7:30 o'clock while Wells was waiting on two unidentified customers, two men wearing white burlap masks entered the store, ordered everyone into the middle of the store and then rifled the cash register. Cursing at the small amount of money, they ran out the door, south on Lewis where they entered a Dodge touring car and drove south.
